

MODULE 3: LANGUAGE FOCUS PRIME LANGUAGE ACADEMY

Le Présent Perfect Continuous :

Partie 1 - Actions en Cours : L'Affirmatif

Utilisation:

On utilise le présent perfect continuous pour parler d'actions :

- Qui ont commencé dans le passé et continuent jusqu'au présent : "I have been eating breakfast for the past hour."
- Récemment terminées et dont les effets sont encore visibles : "She has been crying, her eyes are red."
- Qui expliquent des situations actuelles qui résultent d'actions continues : "We have been living in this house since 2010."
- Répétées récemment : "You have been asking the same question over and over again!"

Structure Grammaticale:

Sujet+have been (ou has been pour la 3ème personne du singulier)+(verbe à la base + "-ing")

Exemples:

- I have been working on this project all day. (action continue)
- You have been studying English for two years. (action continue avec un résultat présent)
- He has been living in Paris since childhood. (situation actuelle issue d'une action passée)
- We have been waiting for the bus for a long time. (action en attente)

Partie 2 : Le Négatif

Utilisation:

On utilise le présent perfect continuous négatif pour :

- Nier une action en cours : "I have not been learning French very long."
- Exprimer un refus d'action : "You have not been listening to me."
- Indiquer l'absence d'effort, de routine ou d'habitude : "He has not been working hard enough." / "We have not been exercising regularly." / "You have not been practicing your piano."
- Décrire une situation négative continue : "They have not been sleeping well lately."

Structure Grammaticale:

Sujet+have not been (ou has not been pour la 3ème personne du singulier)+(verbe à la base + "-ing")

Exemples:

- I have not been feeling well today. (action en cours niée)
- You have not been paying attention in class. (refus d'action)

- She has not been running as much as usual lately. (habitude absente)
- We have not been preparing for the presentation. (absence d'effort)
- They have not been getting along recently. (situation négative continue)

Partie 3 : L'Interrogatif

Utilisation:

On utilise le présent perfect continuous interrogatif pour :

- Demander une confirmation d'une action en cours : "Have I been talking too much?"
- Demander des informations sur une action en cours ou récemment terminée : "Have you been watching the new series?"
- Enquêter sur une situation : "Has it been raining all day?"

Structure Grammaticale:

Have/Has + sujet + been + participe présent (verbe à la base + "-ing")

Exemples:

- Have you been eating breakfast yet? (question sur une action)
- Have we been waiting too long for the doctor? (question d'attente)
- Have they been arguing again? (question sur une situation)
- Has she been studying hard for the exam? (vérification)
- Have you been feeling better lately? (question sur une expérience)

Exercices :

1. Transformez les phrases de la partie 1 à la forme négative, puis interrogative.
2. Complétez les phrases avec le présent perfect continuous correct du verbe entre parenthèses.
3. Écrivez cinq questions sur les actions en cours ou récemment terminées de vos amis/famille en utilisant le présent perfect continuous.
4. Jouez à un jeu où l'un de vous décrit une action en utilisant le présent perfect

- What have you been learning about recently?

Text

Sarah has been living in her current city for five years. She has been traveling to many different countries in the past few years, and her favorite place to visit so far is Italy. She has been exploring Rome, Florence, and Venice, and she hopes to continue exploring more of the country in the future. Sarah has also been working as a teacher since she completed her college degree. She has been loving working with children and feels fulfilled in her career.

Dialogue

A: Hi Emily, what have you been doing all morning?

B: Hi John, I've been working on my presentation for tomorrow's meeting.

A: That sounds important. Have you almost finished it?

B: I've been making good progress, but I still have a few slides left to complete.

A: Well, good luck with that. Have you been drinking enough water?

B: Thanks, John. Actually, I haven't been feeling well, so I haven't been eating or drinking much.

A: I'm sorry to hear that. Maybe you should take a break and get some rest.

B: You're right. I think I will. Thanks for checking in.
