Voix active et voix passive

The future continuous tense can be used in both the active and passive voice.

- Active Voice: The subject of the sentence performs the action.
- Passive Voice: The subject of the sentence is the recipient of the action.

Active Voice Structure

Subject + will be + verb - ing + object

Passive Voice Structure

Object + will be being + verb (past participle) + by + Subject (optional)

Examples (Active) | Examples (Passive)

- The teacher will be teaching a new lesson tomorrow.
| A new lesson will be being taught by the teacher tomorrow.
- We will be building a treehouse in the summer.
| A treehouse will be being built in the summer (by us).

Note: The passive voice is not as common in the future continuous tense as the active voice. It is often used to emphasize the object of the sentence or when the person performing the action is unknown.

Dialogue

Here's a dialogue using the future continuous tense:

Setting: Two friends, Nadia and Liam, are planning a weekend camping trip.

Nadia: Hi Liam, so excited for our camping trip this weekend!

Liam: Me too, Nadia! I can't wait to get away from the city.

Nadia: Have you packed everything yet?

Liam: Almost. I'll be packing my sleeping bag and tent later tonight. What about you?

Nadia: I'll be finishing up my packing this afternoon. I still need to pack some snacks and my hiking boots.

Liam: Sounds good. We should be leaving around 8 am on Saturday, right?

Nadia: That's the plan! I'll be waking up early to make some breakfast sandwiches for the road.

Liam: Perfect! In the meantime, I'll be checking the weather forecast to make sure we're prepared for anything.

Nadia: Great idea. Hopefully, it won't be raining all weekend!

Liam: Don't worry, the forecast looks good for sunshine. We'll be setting up camp by lunchtime and then spending the afternoon exploring the hiking trails.

Nadia: Sounds like a perfect plan! I can't wait to relax by the campfire in the evening and roast some marshmallows.

Liam: Me neither! This is going to be a great weekend.

Nadia: Absolutely! See you on Saturday!

Text

A Night at the Observatory (Future Continuous)

The stars are already beginning to twinkle in the inky black sky as Dr. Kapoor sets up her telescope on the rooftop observatory. A cool breeze is whipping through her hair, carrying the distant scent of pine trees from the nearby forest. Anticipation thrums through her veins as she meticulously aligns the telescope with the celestial object she plans to study tonight.

Across the city, ten-year-old Maya is nestled in her bed, excitement keeping her wide awake. Tonight is the night of the annual meteor shower, and she's been waiting for this all week. Dressed in her warmest pajamas and clutching a star chart, she's eagerly waiting for her parents to take her to the rooftop to witness the dazzling display.

Meanwhile, at the bustling space center, a team of engineers will be monitoring the night sky from behind their computer screens. For weeks, they've been preparing for the launch of a new satellite, and tonight is the big night. They'll be continuously tracking the rocket's trajectory, ensuring its smooth ascent into space.

As the hours tick by, Dr. Kapoor will be diligently recording her observations, capturing the faint light of a distant galaxy. Maya, bundled in a thick blanket, will be oohing and aahing with each streak of light across the sky. And the engineers will be glued to their screens, their hearts pounding with every crucial launch.
