Voix active et voix passive

The future perfect continuous tense can be used in both the active and passive voice.

- Voix active: The subject of the sentence performs the action.
- Voix passive: The subject of the sentence is the recipient of the action.

Active Voice Structure: Subject + will have been + verb - ing + object

Passive Voice Structure: | Object + will have been being + verb (past participle) + by + Subject (optional)

Examples (Active) | Examples (Passive)

- The teacher will have been teaching a new lesson for 2 hours by lunchtime tomorrow. | A new lesson will have been being taught for 2 hours by lunchtime tomorrow (by the teacher).
- We will have been building a treehouse all summer.
| A treehouse will have been being built all summer (by us) “we”.

Note: The passive voice is not as common in the future perfect continuous tense as the active voice. It is often used to emphasize the object of the sentence or when the person performing the action is unknown.

Airport Antics (Future Perfect Continuous)

Setting: A crowded airport terminal. Two friends, Alex and Chloe, are waiting for their delayed flight.

Alex: (Sighs) This is getting ridiculous! We've been waiting for this flight for hours!

Chloe: I know, right? By the time we finally get on the plane, we'll have been sitting here for at least five hours.

Alex: Ugh, don't even remind me. At least the Wi-Fi is decent. I'll have been catching up on emails all day by the time we take off.

Chloe: True, that's a good way to pass the time. Maybe I'll have finished reading my entire book by then too.

Alex: You started that book yesterday!

Chloe: Hey, a girl can dream, can't she? Besides, by the time we land, I'll have been practicing my Spanish for the whole trip.

Alex: (Chuckles) Good luck with that. By the time we reach the hotel, we'll have been so sleep-deprived, we'll probably fall asleep right after dinner.

Chloe: Maybe, but at least we'll be in beautiful Italy! Think of all the delicious food we'll have been eating by the end of the week.

Alex: You're right, that's something to look forward to. And the amazing sights! By the time we come back, we'll have been exploring ancient ruins, wandering through charming towns, and soaking up the sun.

Announcer: (Voice over PA system) Attention passengers on flight 472 to Rome. We apologize for the delay. Boarding will begin shortly.

Alex: Finally! Looks like our wait is almost over.

Chloe: Thank goodness! By the time we reach Rome, we'll still be complaining about this delay, but at least we'll be doing it with a gelato in hand!

The Neighborhood Block Party (Future Perfect Continuous)

The aroma of barbecue will have been wafting through the air for hours by the time the sun dips below the horizon. The once quiet street will have been transformed into a vibrant hub of activity. Children will have been chasing each other with laughter echoing through the air, their faces streaked with colorful chalk drawings from the sidewalk art competition. Laughter will also have been spilling from the makeshift stage as local musicians entertain the crowd with a lively mix of tunes.

Throughout the afternoon, neighbors will have been busy connecting and creating new memories. Parents will have been catching up while their children play together. New friendships will have been blossoming between residents who might not have otherwise interacted. A sense of community spirit will have been simmering all day, fueled by shared laughter, friendly competition in the neighborhood games, and the potluck contributions lining the long tables set up down the street.

As the first stars begin to twinkle overhead, fairy lights strung across the street will have been flickering to life, casting a warm glow on the scene. Blankets will have been spread out on the grass, creating a cozy outdoor cinema for the movie projected onto a makeshift screen. The sound of popcorn popping and the murmur of conversation will have filled the air as neighbors settle in for a night of shared entertainment under the stars. By the end of the evening, a warm sense of belonging will have settled over the neighborhood, a testament to the power of community and shared experiences.
