Voix active et voix passive

The future perfect tense can be used in both the active and passive voice.

- Active Voice (Voix active): The subject of the sentence performs the action.
- Passive Voice (Voix passive): The subject of the sentence is the recipient of the action.

Active Voice Structure

Subject + will have + verb (past participle) + object

Passive Voice Structure

Object + will have been + verb (past participle) + by + Subject (optional)

Examples (Active) | Examples (Passive)

- The teacher will have taught a new lesson by tomorrow.
| A new lesson will have been taught by the teacher by tomorrow.
- We will have built a treehouse in the summer.
| A treehouse will have been built in the summer (by us) "we".

Note: The passive voice is not as common in the future perfect tense as the active voice. It is often used to emphasize the object of the sentence or when the person performing the action is unknown.

Dialogue

Dinner Party Dilemmas (Future Perfect Simple)

Setting: Two friends, Sarah and Michael, are discussing their upcoming dinner party.

Sarah: Hey Michael, just a few days left until our dinner party! Are you excited?

Michael: Definitely! I can't wait to catch up with everyone. By the time they arrive, I'll have finished decorating the living room and setting the table.

Sarah: Perfect! I'll have prepped most of the food by then too. I just need to finish the dessert on Saturday morning.

Michael: Sounds delicious. Did everyone RSVP?

Sarah: Yup! Everyone confirmed they'll be there. By Saturday night, we'll have had a chance to chat with all our friends and hopefully enjoyed some delicious food and laughter.

Michael: Absolutely! I wonder what David will bring? By the time he gets here, he'll probably have already tried out that new recipe he was talking about.

Sarah: (chuckles) Knowing David, he probably will! We'll have to make sure he shares the secret with us all.

Michael: Speaking of secrets, did you ever find that missing vase I borrowed?

Sarah: Don't worry, I found it! By the time the guests arrive, everything will be in its place.

Michael: Phew, that's a relief! The last thing we need is a last-minute decoration scramble.

Sarah: Exactly. By Sunday morning, we'll have cleaned up the place and hopefully be feeling relaxed after a fun evening.

Michael: Sounds like a perfect plan! Can't wait to see how it all turns out.

Graduation Day (Future Perfect Simple)

The auditorium will have been bustling with excitement by the time the graduates take their seats. Proud families will have filled the rows, cameras poised to capture this momentous occasion. The anticipation in the air will be thick as diplomas are readied on stage.

Over the past four years, countless memories will have been made. Late-night study sessions fueled by caffeine, exhilarating victories on the sports field, and the nervous excitement of first presentations - all of these experiences will have culminated in this single moment.

As the valedictorian steps forward, a hush will fall over the crowd. Tears will have welled up in some eyes, while others beam with pride. The valedictorian will reflect on the past four years, the challenges overcome, and the friendships forged. By the end of the speech, a sense of accomplishment and a wave of emotions will have washed over the graduates.

Later that evening, celebratory dinners will be held. Laughter will fill the air as graduates reminisce with friends and family. Photos will be taken, toasts will be raised, and stories will be shared. By the end of the night, a bittersweet feeling will linger. The joy of achievement will be intertwined with a touch of sadness as this chapter comes to a close. However, the graduates will carry the lessons learned and the memories made throughout their journey, forever etched in their hearts.
